WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY

Speak out, you got to speak out against the madness, you got to speak your mind,
if you dare.
But don't try to get yourself elected.
If you do you had better cut your hair.

SPEAK OUT

You're lucky I didn't choose "Memories of '72" or "That Was the Year That Was" for the theme of the 1972 Monticola. Not that I ever would have seriously considered anything so trite, but I did almost stick you with "To Our Children's Children Children." (Wouldn't that have pleased the Moody Blues?) But I decided that that theme was unworkable journalistically and terribly irrelevant.

"Speak Out" just came as a brilliant brainstorm . . . something like what Sir Isaac Newton must have had when he came upon gravity. The more I thought about it and discussed it with my staff, the better I liked it.

Sooner or later you're going to have to . . . speak out, that is. You take your daily dose of frustration, prejudice, and disappointment, so you're entitled to something besides sulking.

Speaking out isn't the gift of all, but expression wears many robes. Perhaps "Express Thyself" might have worked out better as a theme. Signs, graffiti, actions, lack of action — all express something about you.

Now there's an interesting point. Lack of action, not expressing thyself, is a fairly clear indication of where you stand. Silence isn't golden, my dear fellow student; it's agreement. You're giving your OK to the status quo. Now if that's where you stand, fine; if not, however, you'd better get your carcass out of the corner and express thyself.

Thank goodness, I'm somewhat encouraged that the death of apathy is coming to campus. Some of you are beginning to speak out in classes, circulate petitions, join interest groups, and even write to your congressman. But we have so far to go! As of January 1972 WV-SPIRG is having to bend over backwards for support; well-qualified students are being turned away from graduate and professional schools because they are women; our students are being discriminated against with high rent and ridiculously expensive clothing; and our coeds cannot even feel safe walking from the Library to their rooms.

So what are you doing about it? Sitting around waiting for it to come closer to home? Do you have to be accosted on Willey Street or thrown out of your apartment to start speaking out? It's too late then. Now is the time.

The D.A. is co-operative; so are the hundreds of political interest groups. Start a group yourself. Rap with people about your gripe. Set it up. Stick to yourself. Truck on. Speak out!

Students Speaking Out

A University education has as its primary purpose the role of preparing a nation's youth to assert their individual talents in planning for its future growth; however, a more important function is the learning process it involves in allowing each of us to discover ourselves in the context of an ever-changing environment.

— Rose Ann Ferrelli
political science senior

Partly due to the press, the word "discrimination" has taken on bad connotations. Discrimination seems to be more related to "bra-burning" and anti-femininity than to the fact that there are very relevant areas where women need to be equalized with men.

— Margaret Mastalerz
AWS president

The parties are the real killers. The social parties, that is. You know the kind. Stray beasts ramming you in the chest because you're supposed to be a rising political star. Handshakes that jar your shoulder joints. Watered down drinks. The scent of cheap cologne drowned out by the scent of cheaper sweat. A cheap smell for a cheap affair.

. . . Nothing is more pathetic than a young and enterprising college student doing his best to imitate his elders. Nothing is more pathetic than a hack in the making. Drink at the right time. Laugh at the right time. Wear a phony grin. Sell your goddamned soul! And sell mine right along with it!

. . . You see, it will be these types who make it politically. It will be they who thirty years from now will be paying lip service to human misery. It will be they who perpetuate a god-awful existence for thousands of West Virginians. And they'll smile that cheap smile, drink that cheap drink, and smell that cheap smell the whole damn time.

— Peter Kalis
student body president

Mr. Charlie is my shepherd, I shall not want
He maketh me to deceive my brothers
He leadeth me to imperialistic universities
He leadeth me in the paths of mass demonstration
Yea though I walk through the paths of oppression
I shall fear no pig, for Charlie is with me
He prepareth a table for me in the presence of racists
He anointeth my head with "anti-nap" hair straighteners
My Eldorado tank runneth over Surely American slavery will follow me all the days of my oppressed life.
And I shall dwell in the urban ghetto forever . . . Amen.

— Phil Mack
blacks editor

I'm sick to death of the emphasis on unimportant things in our society. Black lights, sports cars, holiday cruises, and the finest champagne available are absurdly trite. How can you dare worry about getting your dime back in the phone booth when hundreds of families so close to this University are starving and cold?

— Beverly Ammar
public relations

These days it has become commonplace to cruelly criticize others' attitudes, ideas, and lifestyles. Apparently, respect for the feelings of one's fellow man has disappeared. Hopefully, our generation will not only learn to tolerate one anothers' views; but more importantly, through honest discourse between those persons having conflicting beliefs, our generation will be able to solve the myriad of problems facing us.

— Tom Tinder
third year law student

This campus will not have a real student government until first, a majority of students realize we don't have one now, and secondly, students begin to speak out and unify. Until this happens we will continue to have a student administration, not government, another controlled arm of the University administration.

. . . The problem of government of the past is a failure to follow through. I've learned you can't let down, you can't give in when you face the opposition. You can't make a lot of promises that look good on paper and then forget why the students elected you.

— Dave Kostelansky
speaker of Student Legislature

Others Speaking Out

— Rod McKuen

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character. With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing that we will be free one day.

Violence on campuses is bad, but systematic and widespread suspicion and distrust are worse. Education depends completely upon mutual respect and trust between student and teacher. Little lasting damage will be done through student efforts to embarrass and unseat presidents, but corrosion of the relation between student and professor could well be fatal to higher education.

There is no question that the world of 1971 looks different to a twenty-five-year-old than it does to his father (though it probably looks pretty bad to his father). As Peter Schrag has so aptly put it, each of us is now an immigrant in his own nation. But, if the nation learns from its youth, the learning will not take place through confrontation, obscenity, hostility, and violence. This newest and most difficult learning task will probably be entrusted to the colleges and universities, which will try to meet it through commitment to the open mind, to rationality, and to patience in debate. Hopefully, the United States will be the first major nation to learn productively from young citizens just entering adulthood.

ADMINISTRATION

Virginia Burchfield, editor

Next to the dissemination of distrust and suspicion, the greatest threat to today's universities is the rise of the Radical Right. Those now involved in faculties and administration can easily remember their contact with McCarthyism, which was generated as a reaction to an earlier widespread national anxiety. I wish there were some way to convince today's dissidents that things can be far, far worse. For, unless some better ways to express dissent can be found, things in the universities will, indeed, be far, far worse.

We may safely assert that the knowledge that men can acquire of women, even as they have been and are, without reference as to what they might be, is wretchedly imperfect and superficial and will always be so until women themselves have told all that they have to tell.

A student gains from his college years only what he is willing to actively pursue and strive to attain. Participation in campus organizations is a preparation in the art of living, and as such comprises a major segment of college activity. Whatever the type of organization — honorary, governmental, athletic, publication, musical, military religious, special interest — involvement entails a process of expansion and extension through convergence with a group of people who are likewise involved.

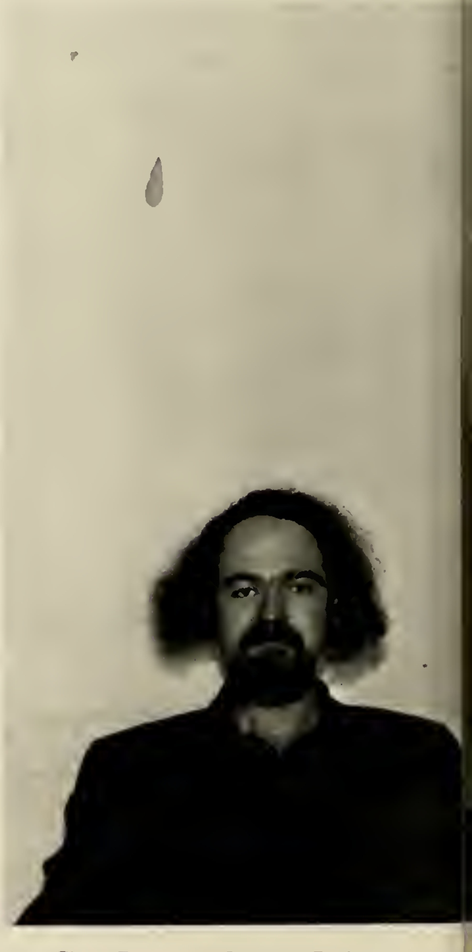
Student Administration serves as the governing body of the student population and touches all aspects of student life. The executive branch serves as a liaison for student opinion to the administration, faculty, Board of Regents, and community. From concerts to draft counseling, from academics to intramurals, they serve to represent in every necessary area the best interest of the students.



Chap Donovan, Student Body Treasure

Terry Wagner, Administrative Assistant, and Tari McClintock, Student Administration Secretary.

The purpose of the coordinators is to carry out the programming aspects of student administration. The three men represent the entire student body's needs and interest in program operations.

The cultural area consists of pop concerts, Forum Festival speakers, films, performing arts, and fine arts. The Recreation-Intramurals area consists of men's intramurals and corecreation, Mountainlair facilities, and arts and crafts. The social area includes Homecoming, Mountaineer Weekend, Spring Spree, travel groups, special events, Human Love in Action, Coffee House acts, and other social activities.

As a group Executive Council has established liaisons and performed various tasks and projects, often sublime, which they feel are in the students' interest.

The May Day Peace Rally last spring, a statewide Student Voluntarism Conference in December, and this spring's voter registration were projects originating from the Executive Council.

n Gardill, Attorney-General.

Coordinators — Booker Walton, recreation-intramurals; Ed Hambrick, social; Alan Zucari, cultural.

Orchesis

Orchesis strives to offer interested students the opportunity for extracurricular creative dance study, composition, and performance and to stimulate the appreciation and understanding of modern dance on the campus and in the community. Programs include Children's Concert and the Annual Spring Dance Concert.

Black America: Resignation or Determination?

BLACKS

The Black Youth, so sweet, beautiful, and innocent, will shape into the leaders of tomorrow (today). The Black Youth will play an important role in nation-building. The Black Youth are the hope for a better day today. Our Black Youth must be prepared to adjust and bend to highs and lows of society, but never break. The Black Youth will be strong and ready to confront the deterrents of life. We must realize that the Black Youth will be the army of tomorrow (today), ever fighting the overtones that will confront their daily lives. I wonder will America be ready?

America. My home. Land of sweet liberty. I wonder will I have a real opportunity?
To love. Be happy. Play and shout. And know what life's really about.
Oh America! Can you possibly see far far beyond the color of me?
As the sun keeps sleeping behind the sea, America so shall you remain a part of me.
America as I grow up to live, I wonder what would you have me give?
America as I grow up to live, I wonder what do you have to give?

Dr. Royal C. Gilkey:
Action and Reaction

Beauty, as a commodity, is one thing in our American economy that cannot be easily bought or sold.

But you look at the line of beauty aids of all shapes and sizes — hair removers, false eyelashes, hair tints, facial masques, electric doodads that can make a beauty out of a beast — and you tell me that I'm feeding you a line of bullshit.

Okay, you have your ideas and I have mine, but once all those artificial beauty-makers are removed, one look can tell you that you fit into one category or the other. You are either more a beauty than a beast or vice versa.

I'm not saying that cosmetics are a waste of time and money, or that you shouldn't try to improve your looks if you want. What I am saying is that thanks to Revlon, Max Factor, Cover Girl and a host of other cosmetic lines, a lot of girls in this world would have been able to make beauties of themselves.

Society as a whole demands this of us. We are geared to a culture of "beautiful people," and any girl who wants to make it in this world can't go running around without her trusty makeup bag at her side. It is hopeless for us girls to try to get anywhere without self-improvement of some sort, be it anything from rubber bottoms to falsies.

So, Annie . . . get your gun, get your makeup, and buy your ticket to happiness.*

Greeks at WVU forty years ago and Greeks at WVU today are similar in many ways. There are still the fraternity parties, pledge Sundays, listening parties, pinning circles, cheers, pins and lavaliers — all of which sufficed years ago to designate the Greek population as a separate and distinct segment of the WVU population.

What separates the Greeks of yesterday and the Greeks of 1972 can be surmised in one word — concern. Greeks at WVU have committed themselves to a course of social action designed to not only upgrade their nationally failing image, but mainly because of a sincere concern for human welfare.

Greeks today are also involved in campus government. The Greek system has served as a melting pot for exchange of ideas between members, and as such has reached out into the entire student population for support.

Years ago it was easier to spot a Greek in a crowd — he was apart from the main of the student population. He was a purely social animal.

Today's Greek is still a Greek in the social sense. He goes to the parties and shouts the cheers, but he has an added dimension. The Greeks of '72 are socially and politically concerned. They are involved . . . they are speaking out!

A great many memories can grow out of a football season: the wins, the losses, and some special ones that weren't posted on the scoreboard — the ones that make you wonder if it's all worthwhile. One such memory brings to mind the instant I learned that a plane had crashed among the hills of southern West Virginia. I think about how it carried a football team down with it, and I wonder if the performance of that team's players on the gridiron was worth the cost of their lives.

The Marshall Tragedy made just about everyone on campus stop and think. But a year later that disaster seems to have been forgotten. People have managed to stow the thought of it away with that semester's notebooks, and while it does no good to worry over what has already passed, it does no harm to reflect now and then on the consequence of so many deaths.

Amidst the tears and the empty, helpless feelings of those who mourned the Marshall players, cries and questions were raised concerning the need, the relevance, of athletics in a university environment. People realized the risks involved, and they wondered if it was worth taking those risks just to gain a little popularity and a few alumni endowments "for the good of the school." Many such questions went unanswered, but the athletic tradition went on in spite of them.

A year has passed since those questions of relevance were raised, but in pausing to think of the importance of athletics at WVU, such questions must be asked.

For example, how many books could have been bought, or instructors hired, by the money spent instead on Astro-Turf? What kind of dormitory could have been built, or how many scholarships could have been granted, if the money devoted to the Coliseum hadn't been earmarked for that purpose? Surely such aims as increased housing and more qualified instructors are far nobler than the acquisition of false grass and a basketball palace, but if this is so, then why were the available resources used to promote sports? Why is a high quality of athletics necessary in an environment devoted to higher education?

The most apparent answer comes in the form of dollar signs and publicity. If the Mountaineer Classic or the Penn State game draws alumni back to the alma mater, it also brings to Morgantown their hearts and their checkbooks.

Beyond this lie more deeply entrenched and more important reasons for athletic competition. Anyone who has experienced victory and defeat, whether in intercollegiate football or in an all-night game of cards knows the tense enjoyment of competition. Anyone who has cheered or cried, or even complained at a basketball game knows, somehow, the "importance" of athletics. One can't place a price tag on the excitement and pleasure gained from Pitt Weekend. And did you ever try to describe the feeling you experience when you read about another victory for the rifle team? Who cares about the rifle team? I do, and so do thousands of others, although no one is quite sure why.

Further, the world of athletics survives, perhaps, because it is relatively free from the discrimination and cheating that mark reality's troubled world. The realm of sports is one of ability and determination instead. Finally, a value of athletics is in the lesson competition teaches those involved — that just as in life, you have to take the losses hand-in-hand with the wins — one must learn to be humble in victory, proud in defeat, and loyal to cause.

My conclusion is athletics play an important and necessary role in the university environment. The excitement and experience afforded by competition are relevant to the atmosphere of academia. Only the scores are irrelevant, presenting but a false, numerical surface. Would it have made much difference if Marshall had won all their games in 1970?

A person can't really speak out by reciting traditional and expected facts; thus I hope to say something special by omitting the scores and statistics from this section. The memories remain in the faces of the players who gave them to you. This section, further, gives those players and coaches the chance to speak out for themselves. I'm sure that some will feel offended that their prized and neatly aligned numbers have been left out; but I wonder what those persons believe the importance of athletics to be.

There are sports programs in the U.S. that build sportmanship, but there are others that believe it isn't whether you win or lose, but how you win . . . A coach has to treat each member of the team as an individual, and set goals that can be reached by each of them. When they have attained that goal it is the coach's responsibility to set new goals and keep the athlete improving.

I don't think there is too much emphasis on sports, but it is relative and depends on what your values are. There are people in academics who think there is too much and there are parents who feel both ways. It is a matter of values.

Way back in 1968 (Can it be such a long time ago?), I, along with a few thousand others came to WVU looking for something.

Exactly what each of us in the Class of '72 was trying to find then has probably been mellowed by four years of new and challenging experiences. We all had our own individual expectations, and many prospective members of the Class of '72 found that life at WVU was short-lived, by either choice or necessity.

For those of us that are still here, life is now bringing newer and more challenging experiences our way. The seniors of '72 are a part of the national climate, and the forecast out there in the big, bad world isn't too promising.

The job market is flooded . . . Ph.D.'s are pumping gas! We are the product of a transistorized age — computer babies stuck in a world with too many people, not enough food, dirty air, dirty water, strip mines, inflation, unemployment, and an almost twenty-year involvement in a war that nobody really wanted in the first place.

Don't worry, people. What is life without problems? The only thing left for us to do is get out there and try to make it better when our kids are in the same place we are now. Maybe you can't get a job come May — you could get married . . . or go on welfare . . . or both!

Why, love has flown,
Love has gone to glitten.

The '72 *Monticola Staff

Salutes the Class of 1972

May its members always enjoy high spirits, undaunted courage, and a sense of humor.

*The name, "Monticola," is derived from Latin. Its rather free translation is "mountain dweller," or "mountaineer." All the qualities that "mountaineer" brings to mind — that is, spirit, courage, and humor — are this staff's most fondest wish to the graduating seniors.

The Monticola '72 Staff is especially grateful to the establishments and individuals listed in the advertising and parent patron sections. Without their support, Monticola '72 could not have been published.

YOUR Progress is OUR Progress . . .

"Partners in area progress" is WVU's motto as well as ours.

Best Wishes for your continued achievement!

We plan to be serving West Virginia when he's a grandfather

No one knows what the world will be like when his grandchildren are trying out that rocker. But it can be said with some assurance—he and his family will need household energy.

Right now Hope Gas is planning ahead to supply that energy. We're installing pipelines and other equipment that will serve for generations. We're deep in research to convert coal into pipeline gas.

Yes, Hope Gas will be here for years and years to come. That's one reason why we and our employees are working to make West Virginia a good place to live.

Speak out, you got to speak out against
the madness, you got to speak your mind,
if you dare.
But don't try to get yourself elected.
If you do you had better cut your hair.
